O'CONNELL ON DISRAELI.

We copy from Mr. Fagan's "Life and Times of O'Connell," the celebrated speech of O'Connell on Disraeli, in reply to a speech, in which the latter spoke in most disrespectful terms of O'Connell, using the words "incendiary," "traitor." and other still less complimentary terms. It will prove interesting to many who have not before seen it : Yet, sir, the "No Popery" cry is again raised in England, and every enemy to Ireland in that country does me the honor of directing the arrows of his malevolence against me. But I have risen to a magnitude I never thought I would attain by the quantity of slander poured out upon me through the medium of the English press. They make me a bug-bear of the first magnitude, though any bug of my size would be a humbing; but, literally, nothing is more ludierous than the importance they attach to my humble name. I am not accustomed to feel much surprised at their resorting to me for "lack of argument." but. I must confess, there is one of the attacks on me which excites in my mind a great deal of astonishment. It is this-the attack lately made at Taunton by Mr. Disraeli. In the annals of political torpitude there is not anything deserving the appellation of "blackguardism" to equal that attack upon me. What is my acquaintance with this man? Just this-in 1831, or the beginning of 1832, the borough of Wickham became vacant; I then knew him, but not personally. I knew him only as the author of one or two novels. He got an introduction to me, and wrote me a letter, stating that, as I was a Radical Reformer, and as he was also a Radical, and was going to stand upon the Radical interest for the borough of Wickham, where, he said, there were many persons of that way of thinking who would be influenced by my opinion, he would feel obliged by receiving a letter from me recommendatory of him as a Radical. His letter to me was so distinct upon the subject that I immediately complied with the request, and composed as good an epistle as I could in his behalf. I am in the habit of letter-writing, sir, and Mr. Disraeli thought this letter so valuable that he not only took the autograph, but had it printed and placarded. It was, in fact, the ground upon which he canvassed the borough. He was, however, defeated; but that was not my fault. I did not demand gratitude from him; but I think if he had any feeling of his own. he would conceive that I had done him at least a civility, if not a service, which ought not to be repaid by atrocity of the foulest description The next thing I heard of him was that he had started upon the Radical interest for Marylebone, but was again defeated. Having been twice defeated on the Radical interest, he was just the fellow for the Conservatives, and, accordingly, he joined a conservative Club, and started for two or three places on the Conservative interest. How is he now engaged? Why, in abusing the Radicals, eulogising the king and the church, like a true Conservative. At Taunton this misegeant had the audacity to style me an incendiary! Why, I was a greater incendiary in 1831 than I am at present—if I ever was one; and, it I am, he is doubly so, for having employed me. Then he calls me a traitor. My answer to that is—he is a liar. He is a liar in action and in words. His very life is a living lie. He is a disgrace to his species. What state of society must that be that could tolerate such a creature, having the audacity to come forward with one set of principles at one time, and obtain political assistance by reason of those principles-and, at another. to profess, diametrically, the reverse? His life, I say again, is a living lie. He is the most degraded of his species and kind; and England is degraded in tolerating, or having upon the face of her society, a misercant of his abominable, foul, and atrocious nature. My language is harsh, and I owe an apology for it; but I will tell you why I owe that apology. It is for this reason: that, if there be harsher terms in the British language, I should use them, because it is the hardest of all terms that would be descriptive of a wretch of his species. He is just the fellow for the Conservative Club. I suppose if Sir R. Peel had been out of the way, when he was called upon to take office, this fellow would have undertaken to supply his place. He has falsehood enough, depravity enough, and selfishness enough, to become the fitting leader of the Conservatives. He is Conservatism personified. His name shows he is by descent a Jew. His father became a convert. He is the better for that in this world; and I hope, of course, he will be the better for it in the next. There is a habit of underrating that great and oppressed nation, the Jews. They are cruelly persecuted by persons calling themselves Christians—but no person ever yet was a Christian who persecuted. The cruelest persecution they suffer is upon their character, by the foul names which their calumniators bestowed upon them before they carried their atrocities into effect. They feel the persecution of calumny severer upon them than the persecution of actual force, and the tyranny of actual torture. I have the happiness to be acquainted with some Jewish families in London; and, among them more accomplished ladies, or more humane, cordial, high-minded, or bettereducated gentlemen, I have never met. It will not be supposed, therefore, that when I speak of Disraeli, as the descendant of a Jew. that I mean to tarnish him on that account. They were once the chosen people of God. There were misereants among them, however, also; and it must have certainly been from one of those that Disraeli descended. He possesses

MAJOR NOAH ON MARRIAGE. - The late veteran of the press, M. M. Noah, held a very racy pen, which threw off sparkling paragraphs with as much ease "as the lion shakes the dew-drops | moist with perspiration. Then the spasm subfrom his mane!" The following is one of them: sides into a gentle motion of the jaw and We like short courtships; in this Adam acted like a sensible man-he fell asleep a bachelor, and awoke to find himself a married man. He appeared to have popped the question almost immediately after meeting Md'lle Eye, and she, without any flirtation or shyness, gave him a kiss and herself. Of that first kiss in this world we have had, however, our own thoughts; and sometimes, in a poetical mood, have wished we were the man 'what did it.' But the deed is done; the chance was Adam's, and he improved it. We like the notion of getting married in a garden. It is good taste. We like a private wedding .- Adam's was private. No envious beaux were there; no croaking old maids; no chatting aunts and grumb-ling grand-mothers. The birds of heaven were minstrels, and the glad sky flung its light upon

just the qualities of the impenitent thief who died upon the cross; whose name, I verily believe, must have been Disraeli. For aught I know, the present Disraeli is descended from him; and with the impression that he is, I now forgive the heir-at-law of the blasphemous thief

who died upon the cross.

"One thing about the first welding brings queer things to us, in spite of its Scriptural truth. Adam and his wife were rather young to marry-some two or three days old, according to the sagest speculation of theologians-mere babies-larger but not olderwithou: experience-without a house-without a pot or kettle-nothing but love and Eden."

AGE OF VIRGINIA CAVERNS .- At a recent meeting of the Boston Natural History Society, Professor Wm. B. Rogers stated that a number of years since, he had made experiments in the Stalactitic Caverns of Virginia, for the purpose of obtaining data in regard to the age of these deposits. He placed vessels in an unfrequented part of the cave, beneath drippings of various dimensions, where they remained for a period of from five to seven years. He arrives at the conclusion, as the result of his observations, that the rate of accretion is one tenth of an inch in five years, or an inch in fifty years. As there are several feet of accumulated deposit in some places, he thinks that the process must fruit Fowler, Hope-for Bending, Graceful Hard-have been going on for at least five thousand ing. DICKENS'S STORY OF THE ORIGIN OF PICKWICK. Mr. Dickens has latterly been issuing what is called a popular edition of his works, in which he treats us to this little account of the origin of Pickwick: "I was a young man of three and twenty when the present publishers, attracted by some pieces I was at that time writing in the Morning Chronicle newspaper, (of which one series had been collected and published in two volumes, illustrated by my esteemed friend, Mr. Geo. Cruikshank.) waited upon me to propose a comething that should be published in shilling numbers-then only known to me, or I believe to anybody else, by a dim recollection of certain interminable povels in that form which used to be carried about the country by pedlers, and over some of which I remember to have shed innumerable tears before I had served my apprenticeship to Eife.

"When I opened my door in Furnival's Inn to the managing partner who represented the firm, I recognized in him the person from whose hands I had bought, two or three years previously, and whom I had never seen before or since, my first copy of the magazine in which my first effusion-dropped stealthily one evening at twilight, with fear and trembling, into a dark letter box, in a dark office, up a dark court in Fleet street-appeared in all the glory of print; on which memorable occasion-how well I recollect it!- I walked down to Westminster Hall and turned into it for half an hour, because my eyes were so dimmed with joy and pride that they could not bear the street, and were not fit to be seen there. I told my visitor of the coincidence, which we both hailed as a good omen, and so fell to business.

"The idea propounded to me was that the monthly something should be a vehicle for certain plates to be executed by Mr. Seymour; and there was a notion, either on the part of that admirable humorous artist or of my visitor (I forget which), that a 'Nimred Club,' the members of which were to go out shooting, fishing, and so forth, and getting themselves into difficulties through their want of dexterity, would be the best means of introducing these. I objected, on consideration, that, although born and partly bred in the country, I was no great sportsman, except in regard of all kinds of locomotion; that the idea was not novel, and had been already much used; that it would be infinitely better for the plates to arise naturally out of the text; and that I should like to take my own way, with a freer range of English seenes and people, and was afraid I should ultimately do so in any case, whatever course I might prescribe to myself at starting. My views being deferred to, I thought of Mr. Pickwick, and wrote the first number, from the proofsheets of which Mr. Seymour made his drawing of the Club, and that happy portrait of its founder by which he is always recognised, and which may be said to have made him a reality. I connected Mr Pickwick with a club because of the original suggestion, and I put in Mr. Winkle expressly for the use of Mr. Seymour. We started with a number of twenty-four pages instead of thirty-two, and four illustrations in lieu of a couple. Mr. Seymour's sudden and lamented death before the second number was published, brought about a quick decision upon a point already in agita-tion; the number became one of thirty-two pages, with two illustrations, and remained so to the end. My friends told me it was a low, cheap form of publication, by which I should ruin all my rising hopes; and how right my friends turned out to be everybody now knows. ... Boz,' my signature in the Morning Chronicle, appended to the monthly cover of this book, and retained long afterward, was the nickname of a pet child, a younger brother, whom I had dubbed Moses, in honor of the Vicar of Wakefield, which, being facetiously pronounced through the nose, became Boses, and being shortened, became Boz. 'Boz' was a very familiar household word to me long before I was an author, and so I came to adopt

THE WOMAN. WHO LIVES WITHOUT EATING.

We have published several letters respecting this extraordinary case of suffering; they are important to scientific men, and painfully interesting to all. The following is written by Rev. S. P. Williams to the Christian Advocate

"Mrs. Hayes is not yet dead. I have seen her several times. And after reading all that has appeared in the Advocate in regard to her, venture to communicate a few thoughts upon her case. Before she passed into this peculiar and afflictive condition, her health was for some length of time extremely poor. She ate but little, and that little occasioned a considerable amount of suffering. Sometimes it threw her into spasms. For nearly a year before she ceased to take refreshments altogether, she lived wholly, or nearly so, upon the juice of dried raspberries, until that became a source of suffering Then, for a time, she took occasionally a small quantity of cold water; and it is now nearly a year since she swallowed any liquid to the knowledge of any one. Indeed I have no doubt that a teaspoonful of liquid put into her mouth would be the occasion of her death, unless the spasmodic action of her throat should expel it. Any person to see her ten minutes must be satisfied there is no deception in her case. Her head and shoulders, one or the other, are in perpetual motion. She is frequently thrown forward until she is nearly loubled together, and then the head thrown back, and her neck literally doubled, and the body forced back, and the whole face, chin and all, entirely buried in the pillow. This is done several times successively in less time than I take in writing it.

The last time in the series the face will remain nearly buried in the pillow, and she does not breathe for ten or fifteen minutes. Once she remained sixty-two minutes without breathing: When this is over and the spasm passes off she struggles for breath, and her head is rolled from side to side almost with the velocity of lightning for a moment or two; the face becomes red with the rush of blood to the head and the skin quite shoulder, keeping time, as one wo'u! think, with action of the heart. Her skin about the face, neck, chest and hands is delicate and heathy as the skin of an infant. The pulsations of her blood about the chest, neck, head and arms, though exceedingly delicate, are quite regular. Her hair does not grow, nor is worn off the head, as one would naturally suppose, except a little just upon the crown. The action of the liver is entirely suspended, of course. The action and state of the lungs are perfectly healthy. They have been thoroughly examined by skilful physicians, with the aid of a stethoscope, and are supposed to be perfect. Her nourishment is wholly from the atmosphere. The last nutriment, indeed the last swallow of water she was known to take, was in the last of June, 1857. The last time she was known to be conscious was list December. When she coines out of these long spasms she seems to cry for a moment, like an infant in distress. At such times her husband thinks she may be conscious. It is most distressing to hear it. She is not above the ordinary laws of disease. She has recently had a thorough case of the mumps, precisely as others have them. Her nails upon her fingers, like her hair, do not grow at all.
